Xintong Song is a bilingual attorney fluent in Mandarin Chinese and English, with a sophisticated litigation practice focused on complex commercial disputes and international legal matters. She has represented clients in a wide range of high-stakes cases, including breach of contract, non-compete agreements, fraudulent transfers, misappropriation of trade secrets, breach of fiduciary duty, business ownership conflicts, and property tax litigation.

Ms. Song has significant experience in commercial lending disputes and litigation involving liens on merchandise, where she navigates intricate financial and transactional issues with precision. She also plays a key role in defending clients in class action lawsuits, including a major Ponzi scheme case involving extensive discovery, multi-party coordination, and complex procedural strategy. Her ability to manage large-scale litigation and distill complex legal issues into actionable strategies is a hallmark of her practice.

Her litigation work spans professional malpractice defense and intellectual property disputes, including patent, trade secrets, trademarks, and copyright matters. Ms. Song attends hearings and manages all phases of litigation—from pre-suit investigation through trial preparation. She drafts and argues motions, prepares briefs and pleadings, and provides clients with clear, pragmatic legal counsel.

In addition to her litigation practice, Ms. Song advises clients on insurance coverage, corporate governance, employment law, and intellectual property protection. She earned her Bachelor of Laws degree in China and passed the Chinese Bar in 2016, bringing a unique international perspective to her work.

Ms. Song has extensive experience representing international clients—particularly Chinese-speaking businesses and individuals—helping them navigate the complexities of the American legal system. Her deep understanding of cross-cultural dynamics and legal frameworks enables her to bridge cultural and legal gaps, delivering effective, culturally attuned legal solutions tailored to each client's needs.

In recognition of her professional excellence, Ms. Song was selected as one of Fort Worth Magazine's Top Attorneys of 2024.
